Cured shoulder from Grigio del Casentino pig breed

| DESCRIPTION | Cured shoulder from Grigio del Casentino pig bred in Tuscany in the semi wild The shoulder has a half moon shape; when cut, the slice has a ruby red colour with an important marbling |
|-------------|--|
| TASTE | The taste is full, similar to a spanish Paleta but with more Tuscan character thanks to the traditional seasoning. The hints are of nuts and cave |
| MATURING | At least 120 days |
| PRODUCER | Selve di Vallolmo - Poppi (AR) - Tuscany |
| CURIOSITY | Shoulders are less "stressed" anatomic parts of the pig which makes them slightly more fat than hams but also more tasteful and complex. The historical challenge is the dimensions, but the "moon" shape grants this charcuterie a better handling for the slicing, making it more similar to a Speck. The important thing is to remember to start to slice on the convex side in order have a perfect balance between fat and lean |
| SUGGESTIONS | Suprising in a chatcuterie board, alone with a nice glass of red wine or naturally melted on a warm slice of sourdough bread |
